

Social justice mural marks proud history

➔ THE Chapel By The Sea community at Bondi Beach will this weekend launch a street art mural designed to celebrate social justice for indigenous people. Artists Etienne Cohen and Paul Davis collaborated to create the piece, which has already captured the attention of passers by.

The mural shows the faces of five people who fought for the rights of indigenous people, including Eddie Mabo.

"There's a great deal of interest in what the mural stands for," Ms Cohen said.

"I've had maybe 15 people a day wanting to take photos of it."

The piece is the third in a series of social justice murals, supported by the Uniting Church. The other two murals are in King St, Newtown, and in the CBD.

The mural will be launched at 2pm on Saturday, at Chapel by the Sea, 95 Roscoe St, Bondi Beach.
